WELCOME MESSAGE

Dear Distinguished Scholars, Engineers, Colleagues, and Interested Experts!

During the past three million years, human civilization has been transformed to industrial society from hunting-gathering society through agricultural society. The industrial society has positive and negative faces being conflicted. They are material affluence with convenience in life, and risky situation in daily life. The profiles of risky situation are environmental destruction, technological disasters, etc.

In the above context, this 3rd Global Summit on Recycling and Waste Management conference | Recycling 2027, taking place on March 24-25, 2027, Paris, France. It is not only a core means for achieving sustainable development through efficient and effective recycling and waste management, but also, in a broad sense, provides a platform for exploring strategies responding to the risky situation.

It is no doubt that your participation in this conference contributes greatly to achieving sustainable development at a global level through responding to the two conflicting profiles with which the contemporary industrial society is faced. You do not want to miss this opportunity to be a contributor, do you?
