WELCOME MESSAGE

Ann Marie Leonard Zabel
Curry College & NEALAC Clinic, USA

I am grateful for the opportunity to serve as a Keynote Speaker and Scientific Committee Member for the 5th World Congress on Advances in Mental Health and Psychiatry in Paris, France, in March 2027. It is an honor to join colleagues from around the world for this important international gathering.

Meetings such as this offer much more than the presentation of research. They provide a meaningful space for connection, shared learning, and the ongoing development of collaborations that support progress in mental health care, education, and scientific inquiry. As our field continues to grow and change, these exchanges across disciplines and cultures help us better understand and respond to complex challenges with greater care and insight.

Participants can look forward to a rich scientific program that highlights innovative research, evidence-based practices, and emerging perspectives in mental health and psychiatry. Just as importantly, the congress offers opportunities for thoughtful dialogue, professional connection, and learning from the diverse experiences and expertise of colleagues from around the world.

I look forward to joining you in Paris and to taking part in a conference experience that fosters collaboration, encourages new thinking, and supports the continued advancement of mental health and well-being worldwide.

IHCMD | Institute for Human Conceptual and Mental Development

A perspective on the mind, human development and sustainable change

ABOUT IHCMD

The Institute for Human Conceptual and Mental Development (IHCMD) is an independent, non-profit organization. It was set up in 1990 to facilitate independent research and study. It was to investigate the common human causes that lie behind persisting and growing cultural, religious, racial, political, social, economic, human individual and environmental problems, difficulties and crises we face and we create as a species globally today. Going beyond symptoms and consequences to understand the deeper-rooted problems, causes and developments that lie behind them. In turn, to understand the nature and direction of the answers and solutions, the direction and steps toward a sustainable, equitable, secure and peaceful future.

It involved questioning the fundamentals and essentials of how traditionally throughout the ages and today we understand and manage human existence and development. It required critically questioning traditional socio-cultural beliefs, views, values, conventions and practices. Such fundamental questioning could not take place within academia and the prevailing paradigm. Questioning the fundamentals and essentials of how we understand and manage human existence and development was not possible within existing organizational and institutional structures. It required an independent institutional setting to consider and discuss the issues beyond the pressure to conform to conventional wisdom and established practices.

WHAT WE DO

The Institute conducts research and study dealing with the two most fundamental problems we face in the world today, a growing mental health crisis and an environmental crisis.
The mental health crisis consists of persisting and growing mental health problems - mental disorder and instability, doubt and confusion, uncertainty and insecurity, feelings of fear, stress, anxiety, frustration and depression, and resulting substance use, abuse, addiction, overdose and suicide. They affect everything we do and we engage in, in all areas of human activity, in all sectors and at all levels of society, in private and in public life, in government, business, social services, health care, education and training. They affect how we understand and conduct ourselves individually, how we relate and interact with each other, and how we deal with the world around us, with nature and the natural environment.
The environmental crisis includes climate change and global warming, pollution of air, soil and water - rivers, lakes and oceans, the introduction of millions of synthetic compounds into the natural environment, the loss of biodiversity, the destruction of ecosystems, and the exploitation of renewable and non-renewable natural resources beyond nature’s regenerative capacity. It is leading to changes in nature that in the long-term will render the natural environment of the Earth uninhabitable for the human species.

AREAS OF WORK

Education and training in mental development and growth
PowerPoint lectures on the human condition, natural limits, self-management, sustainable development, transformation, and the mind as the place of conscious experience and action

IHCMD is pleased to support the 5th World Congress on Advances in Mental Health and Psychiatry as a Silver Sponsor.

FEEDBACK

Ann Marie Leonard Zabel

"It was a great honor to participate in the 4th World Congress on Mental Health and Psychiatry in London, where I had the privilege of serving as the opening keynote speaker and session chair. The conference was exceptionally well organized, bringing together leading scholars and professionals from around the world. The high quality of presentations and meaningful discussions reflected a strong commitment to advancing mental health research and practice. I was particularly inspired by the collaborative environment and the opportunity to exchange innovative ideas with esteemed colleagues. The experience has greatly enriched my work, and I am grateful to have been part of such a distinguished and impactful event."
